

Umaga Sa Pasko

This simple, sleepy instrumental was written from childhood memories of waking up on Christmas morning. Awakening me gently would be the cool, crisp air, playfully nipping at my face and tickling my skin. Greeting me merrily would be the sunlight streaming through my window, softened by the light mist hanging in the air. And embracing me warmly, more than my blanket, would be blissful memories of Mass and dinner with the family on Christmas eve.

Drowsy from too much hot chocolate the night before, I would try to go back to sleep, when suddenly, I would realize: It's Christmas—the happiest day of the year!
